Indian Leader and Haskell News Reporters Recognized at National Journalism Conference

By Travis Campbell

Indian Leader staff, Travis Campbell, and advisor, Rhonda LeValdo, attended the annual Excellence in Journalism conference in Anaheim, California. Indian Leader and Haskell News reporters received twenty awards, roughly ten percent of the total awarded, for articles published during the 2016 school year and LeValdo received two awards for her work in radio.

In addition to attending the Native American Journalism Association (NAJA) luncheon and awards banquet attendees were provided the opportunity to attend a number of panels given by distinguished figures in Native American journalism. Recurring themes among these panels included the importance of establishing and maintaining a Native presence in media production, as well as the importance of speaking out against negative stereotyping. One of the most memorable panels was Archiving Tribal History in Print and Digital, given by Erin Fehr, archivist at Sequoyah National Research Center and Cynthia Joyce, editor and associate professor at the University of Mississippi. Fehr and Joyce spoke extensively on the importance of preserving contemporary as well as historical narratives both online and in print. Other panels focused on the importance of journalist safety in the field, coverage of LGBTQ issues, and the use of smart phones in reporting.

A highlight of the conference was the NAJA Membership Luncheon Meeting where Tim Giago, formerly of the Lakota Times which he sold and it was rebranded as Indian Country Today, received the Medill Milestone achievement award. Giago was nominated by the NAJA-Medill selection committee for his lifetime of service to journalism and many years of dedication to NAJA as a founder of the organization. He is a lifetime member and the first president of the original Native American Press Association.

The Indian Leader would like to extend our sincere congratulations to Ms. LeValdo and all of our awards recipients on their success and look forward to seeing the greatness that you all accomplish in the future.

Tom SpottedHorse: 27 years of service at Haskell ends

By Tim Barber

Tom SpottedHorse started employment at Haskell in 1990 and had his retirement service on September 1st 2017. Along with all those years working at Haskell he has had many memories.

SpottedHorse's retirement reception began with an honor song. Followed by a few words from Dr. Venida Chenault, Haskell's current President. SpottedHorse was then gifted with a blanket from the university, and also a pillow from his mother. The reception was finished after SpottedHorse told a story of a night he was working as a Residential Advisor while also finishing his speech with a reassurance he would still be around campus in some way.

When asked what the most rewarding part of working at Haskell was SpottedHorse explained that, "working with students," was the best aspect of Haskell. SpottedHorse is also a Haskell Alumni and was a boarding school student also. Living in boarding school helped SpottedHorse recognize the importance of housing for students.

Recounting his craziest memory of Haskell SpottedHorse responded that there, "were too many to name." One individual memory that stood out he said was, "When I used to work nights a big snow storm had come through. There was a large crowd of guys standing out front taunting my OK Hall boys. This was before the age of cell phones but my boys starting running out of all the front entrances, almost at the same time. As they got outside the other boys rained snowballs at them. Well it was on then! More guys came rushing out of OK Hall and started returning fire with their own snowballs. They started chasing them south across campus as they retreated back towards Blalock. There they got more reinforcements, then other dorms joined in. I could hear them yelling from OK Hall as they got louder. The next thing I heard was they were all at Adobe Flats on the other side of the stadium. It sounded like a battle was going on there, with shouting and blood curdling war whoops. I had to check it out so another student and I walked over there from OK Hall. I swear to this day when we got over there we saw at least 100-150 students in a snowball fight. They were all over Adobe Flats throwing round white snowballs at each other and running all around the Flats. It looked and sounded like the Battle of Little Big Horn. It seemed like the entire school emptied out of their dorms to join in. I went back to my dorm and listened to the battle rage on and on. Finally after a while my boys made it back to the dorm claiming victory with war whoops and raised fists. Indeed, "OK HALL - WHERE LEGENDS ARE MADE". While also expressing that wasn't the craziest but it was a memory that stood out the most.

Kristen Torres, Senior and niece of Tom SpottedHorse, stated in her academic career that SpottedHorse had "helped me a lot. Whenever I needed help in a situation I knew I could count on him (SpottedHorse) to resolve it." Torres stated her most memorable moment with SpottedHorse was when, "I found out he was my uncle. I found out when I first came here around spring of 2016. On-the-clock I was just another student to him, but after he'd get off work him and I would get to meet up and catch up. To me it was great having family around when the rest live 5 hours away."

SpottedHorse explained he's going to miss the people, students and coworkers, the most. Yet he also understands people retiring happens, but the good thing about it is you get to meet new people as the position gets filled and as the one retiring goes on seeing new aspects of life.

Meet Haskell Royalty

Miss Haskell 2017-2018, Caroline Wiseman, is Iñupiaq and Native Hawaiian from Anchorage, AK. She is also adopted Tsimshian into the Ganhada (raven) clan.

Caroline came to Haskell in the fall of 2014. While at Haskell she has been an active participant and leader of Alaska Club and Gamma Delta Pi. Which gave her a wonderful support system on campus. She also went to AIHEC spring conference in 2017 and competed against other tribal colleges.

When Caroline had understood that there had never been an Alaska Native Miss Haskell, she decided to run. As Miss Haskell Caroline wants to embrace the diversity of Haskell community and the Lawrence community. She wants to host events that will provide opportunities for cultural exchange. She believes that to bridge the gap between Haskell and Lawrence, not only should we teach about ourselves, but give Lawrence the chance to share about themselves. Onward Haskell!

Hello, my name is Baron Hoy. I am in my last year at Haskell Indian Nations University studying American Indian Studies. I am Muscogee Creek from the Muscogee Creek Nation of Oklahoma. I am an actor and have been acting since I was five. Currently I am cast in a TV show still in preproduction called "Big Sky." I aspire to create businesses and own real estate enterprises while boosting communities. As Haskell Brave my platforms are Domestic Violence and increasing student life/opportunities. October is Domestic Violence Awareness Month, so stay tuned for announcements that I make for that month. I plan to collaborate with another club on the Domestic Violence Month. I also hope to start looking into starting programs that will help students academically as well as socially.

Onward Haskell!

Another successful Haskell Indian Art Market!

By Travis Campbell

The Haskell Indian Art Market, one of the most anticipated events at the school, celebrated its 29th year on September 9th and 10th. Serving as the largest market for Native American arts and crafts with over 100 vendors, the Indian Art Market draws tens of thousands of visitors to the campus of Haskell Indian Nations University every year.

In addition to arts and crafts, visitors are able to see cultural and dance performances from Haskell students and learn about their importance to their tribes of origin. Also available to Art Market visitors was a plethora of food vendors selling anything from Indian tacos to snow cones.

Undoubtedly the largest event on Haskell's calendar every year, the Indian Art Market has been mentioned in Kansas Magazine's top 70 bucket list experiences in the state.

Roof on Hiawatha Hall finally being repaired

By Allen Stephenson

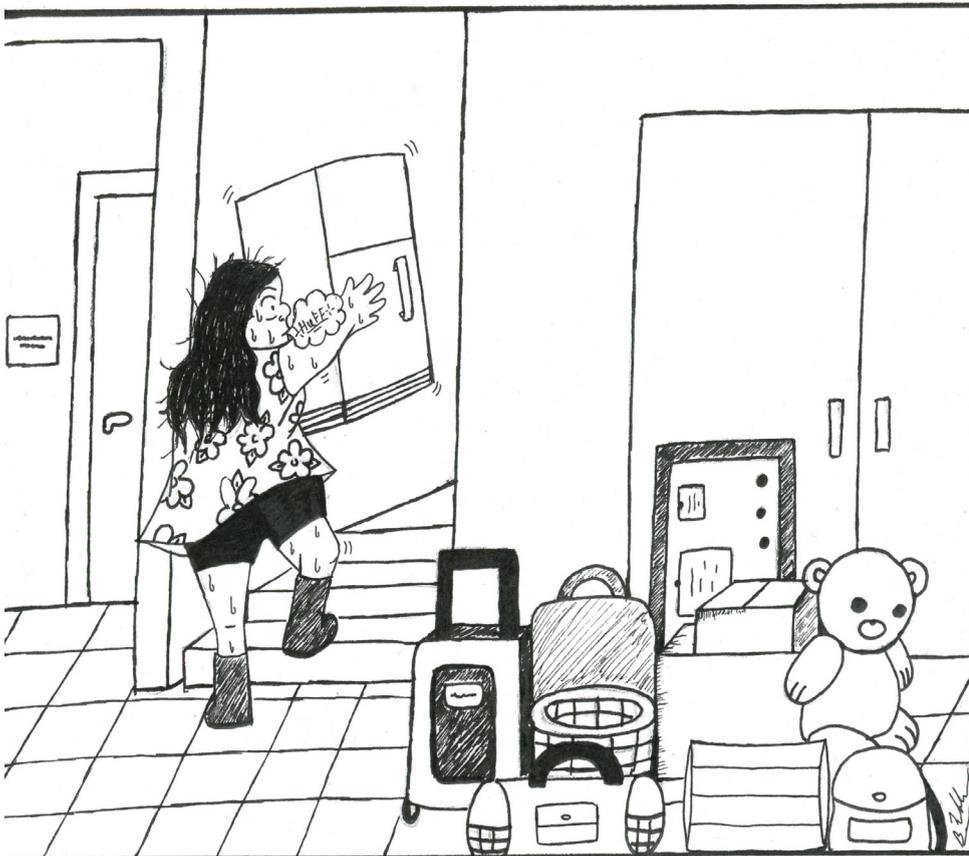

Renovations to the roof at Hiawatha Hall took place this week. The historic building originally served as a chapel and auditorium when it was built in 1898. Since then, it's been repurposed many times, acting as the girl's gymnasium and even a theater. Hiawatha Hall fell into disrepair sometime around 2005 according to Haskell records, due to water damage and mold issues. It is also missing its church bell and no one knows where it is at. Hiawatha also boasts a swimming pool in the basement. Skyline Roofing is the contractor for the job.

Hiawatha was named for the Onondaga leader and great orator who helped influence the formation of the Iroquois League in the New York area in the late 1500's. The National Historic Registry has requested that Hiawatha be a permanent building on campus

While the story of Haskell is varied and diverse, it is uplifting to see the restorative beginnings to a beautiful and legendary piece of history and architecture on campus. Are you excited about restoring Hiawatha Hall? Let us know and as always Onward Haskell.

Haskell Volleyball update By Hunter Hotulke

The Haskell Women's Volleyball team started their season strong with a 3-2 victory over Graceland University. They continued on the road at the Sterling Invitational, where they defeated Bethel College 3-1 and had a hard fought battle against Presentation University, but sadly, came up short going 0-3. The second home game against Bacone College the ladies won the match 3-0. The team has a 5-9 record currently. Their next home games are September 19th and 20th at the Coffin Complex at 6pm versus Graceland University so come out and support the Women's Volleyball team.

Men's and Women's Cross Country Update

By Hunter Hotulke

The Men's Cross Country team season has begun with the Baker Invitational where the Haskell Indians placed 7th. They were led by freshman Sielak Tuckfield who placed 25th. At their second meet the Woody Greeno Invite in Nebraska the team placed 12th. Their next meet is scheduled for September 22nd, at Emporia, KS for the Emporia Invitational. October 7th is the Haskell Invitational, which will be on the Haskell campus.

The Women's Cross Country team's first race was also the Baker Invitational. They were led by freshman Chantel Yazzie who finished 53rd. The team placed 8th. In their second meet at the Woody Greeno Invite in Nebraska they placed 13th. The next meet is in Emporia, followed by the Haskell Invitational.
